

3-D Visual Maps for Children

By Paula Briggs

Following on from a resource which suggests ways to introduce typography to primary aged children, this resource shares how we built on the idea of creating visual text, and created 3-d visual maps.

3-d visual maps

We began with a reminder about how we might make our typography more interesting:

- Think about what the text is trying to communicate. How does the place name relate to the place? What kind of place might it be, and how might the sense of place affect the type of typeface you choose to use?
- Make your drawing interesting by keep your mark making varied. Use lines, dots, dashes. Use different weights of pen (thicknesses of nib) to make a variety of weights of line.

Children were invited to start by marking off areas of their map, for example a cove, beach or forest. Use the shape of the area to inspire the shape of the text, i.e. fill the space with typography! Children worked on A1 sheets of cartridge paper.

	Please log in here to access full content.
Username	<input type="text"/>
Password	<input type="password"/>
	<input type="button" value="Login"/> <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Remember me
	Forgot Password

To access all content, I would like to join as...

An Individual

Creative practitioners, educators, teachers, parents, learners...

From £3.50

An Organisation...

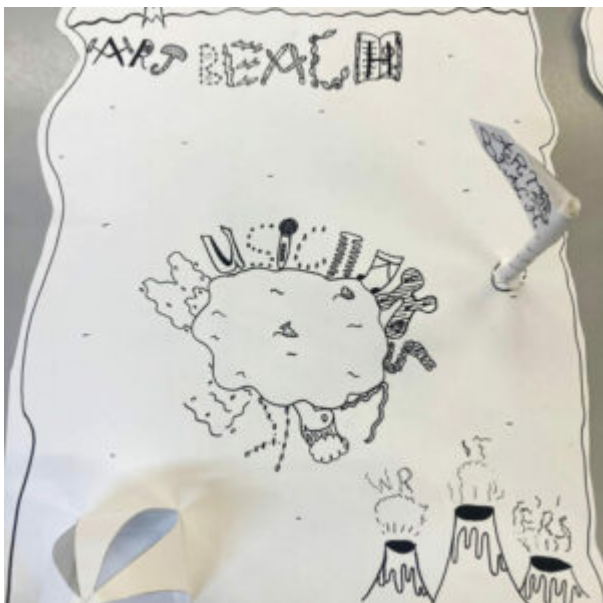

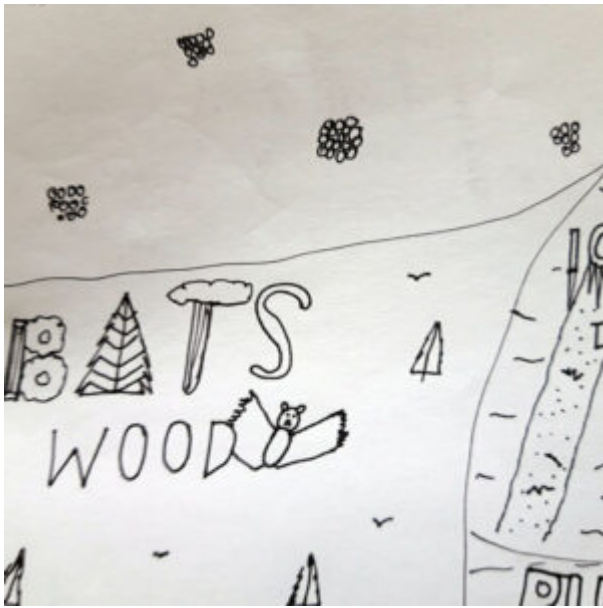

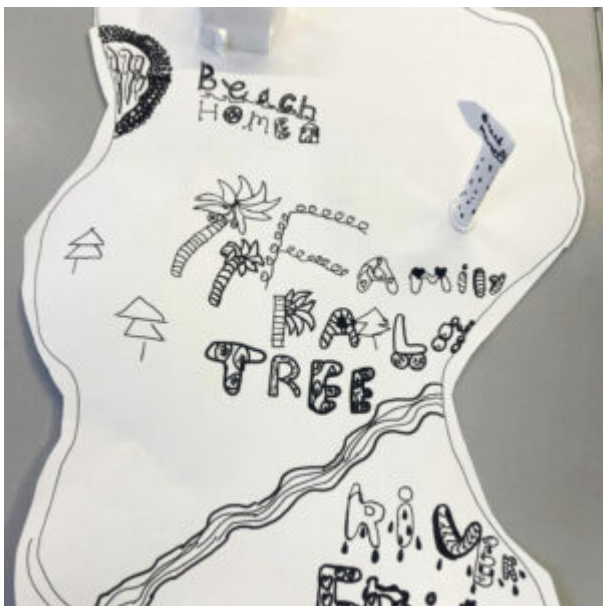

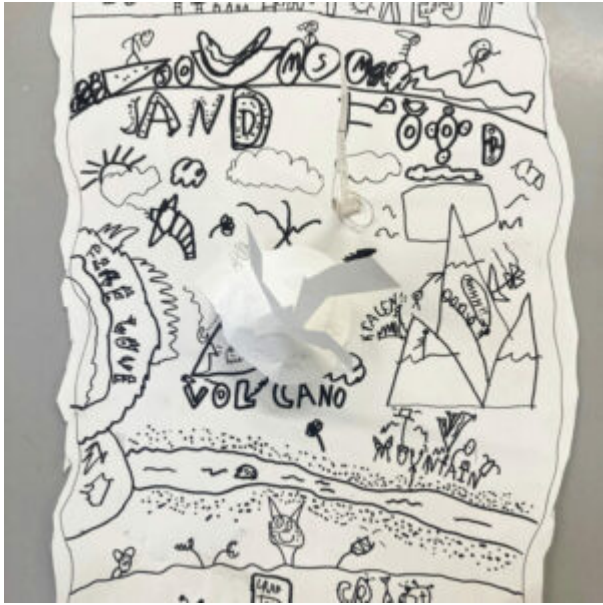

Schools, Colleges, Arts Organisations: Single and Multi-Users
From £42

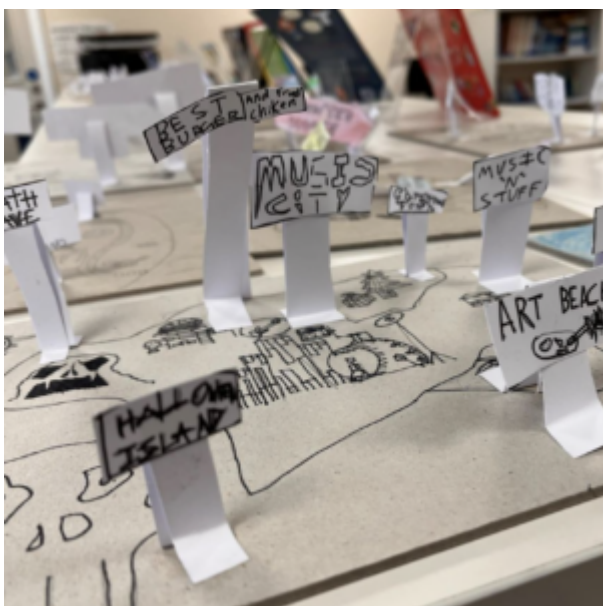

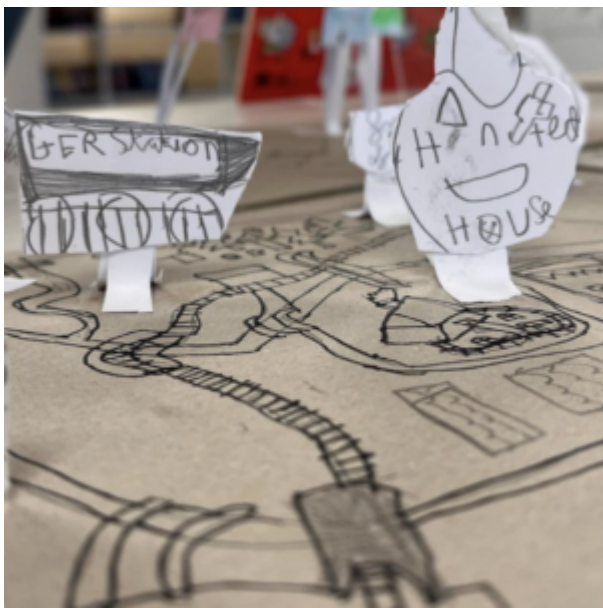

AccessArt is a UK Charity and we believe everyone has the right to be creative. AccessArt provides inspiration to help us all reach our creative potential.

See the Resource Used in Schools...

You May Also Like...

Pathway: Typography and Maps

This is featured in the 'Typography and Maps' pathway

Talking Points: Grayson Perrys 'Map of Days'

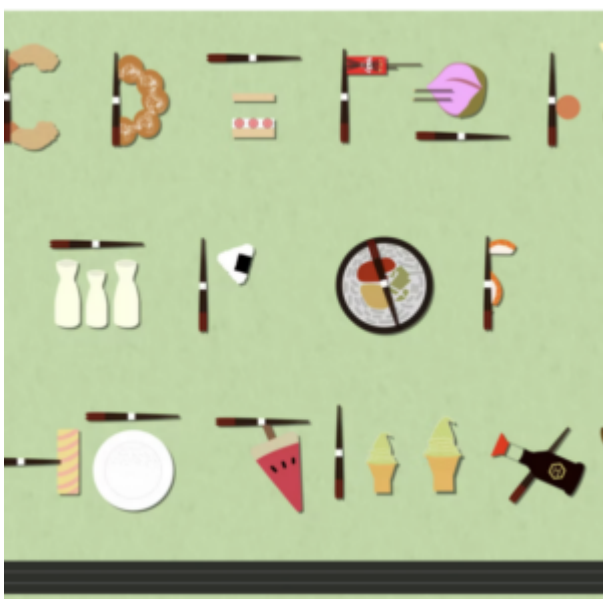

Introduce pupils Grayson Perrys 'Map of Days'

Talking Points: Hogwarts' Maps

A collection of imagery and sources to explore the Hogwarts Maps

Talking Points: What is Typography?

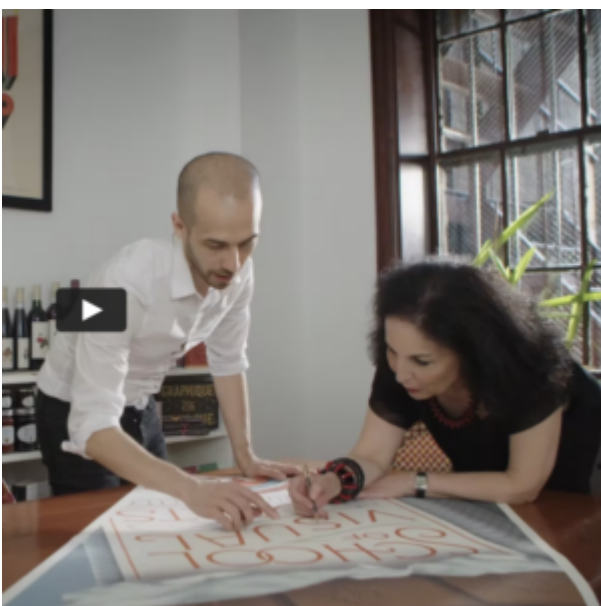

A collection of resources to help children understand what 'Typography' is

Talking Points: Paula Sher

Introduce pupils to the work of graphic designer Paula Sher

Talking Points: Louise Fili

Introduce pupils to the work of Typographer Louise Fili

Talking Points: Chris Kenny

Explore Chris Kenny's 3d maps