

Fruit-Inspired Clay Tiles

By Rachel Dormor

Ceramicist Rachel Dormor shares a workshop idea suitable for primary or secondary aged children. Working in clay, pupils take their inspiration from drawings of fruit to make decorative clay tiles.

If your school does not have access to a kiln, pupils can still make and decorate these vessels, although of course without firing the clay will remain porous. The experience the children will gain from working with clay as a resistant and responsive material will still be very valuable.

This project can be further developed using the Fruit Pinch Pot Project which you can find here.

	Please log in here to access full content.
Username	<input type="text"/>
Password	<input type="password"/>
	<input type="button" value="Login"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Remember me
	Forgot Password

To access all content, I would like to join as...

An Individual

Creative practitioners, educators, teachers, parents, learners...

From £3.50

An Organisation...

Schools, Colleges, Arts Organisations: Single and Multi-Users

From £42

AccessArt is a UK Charity and we believe everyone has the right to be creative. AccessArt provides inspiration to help us all reach our creative potential.

See This Resource Used In Schools...

You Might Also Like...

Pathway: Exploring Still Life

This is featured in the 'Explore Still Life' pathway

talking points: Flemish and Dutch Still Life Painters

Explore the still life paintings of Dutch and Flemish artists between 1600-1800.

Talking Points: Paul Cezanne

A collection of sources to explore the art of Paul Cezanne

talking points: Contemporary still life

A collection of sources to explore contemporary artists who study still life